

The New Room

She beams at her remodeled room
And it beams back
Its fresh new look is straight from a fashion magazine
The colors, the coverings, the cleanliness
All contribute to her feeling of contentment

She retrieves the accessories from the closet
And begins to put them back
But they look different now
Against the backdrop of the new room

Dissatisfied, she rearranges them
Trying them here and there
Finally throwing some out

She digs into the closet again
Brushing off things she hasn't used in a long time
These newly polished treasures
Shine in the new room
She steps back, satisfied

She's searched, sorted, and selected
Still, she needs a finishing touch
She's an opportunity to shop,
To bring something new
To her new room

© Charlene A. Derby. All rights reserved.